Late Bronze Age trade in the eastern Mediterranean. Archaeological appreciation of the Late Bronze Age period in the Mediterranean has been significantly enhanced by the impact of maritime archaeological findings. The eastern Mediterranean seaboard had for a long time been recognised as a region of increasing connectivity between the key players in the region: Pharaonic Egypt in the south, Mesopotamia (modern day Iraq) and the Levantine coast of modern day Syria, Lebanon and Israel-Palestine ...

Late Bronze Age trade in the eastern Mediterranean

The Late Bronze Age Collapse was a transition period in the Near East, Anatolia, the Aegean region, North Africa, the Caucasus, the Balkans and the Eastern Mediterranean from the Late Bronze Age to the Early Iron Age, a transition which historians believe was violent, sudden, and culturally disruptive. The palace economy of the Aegean region and Anatolia that characterised the Late Bronze Age disintegrated, transforming into the small isolated village cultures of the Greek Dark Ages. The half-ce
