You can look up the year a home was built online via the local tax assessor's website. Tax authorities maintain property profiles and the information is available to the public and usually searchable for free. With most government offices digitizing official property records, finding a house's original year of construction is relatively easy.

Alternate side parking (ASP) regulations allow for street cleaning. ASP rules are posted on signs with a "P" crossed by a broom. When ASP is in effect, you can't park on the side of the street that is being cleaned. The rules apply for the entire time posted on the sign, even if a street sweeper has passed.
